

Protect the Bush Alliance (PTBA)

Advocating for increased protection of wildlife habitat in Queensland.

PTBA is an alliance of organisations and individuals to help protect the flora and fauna of Queensland from increasing threats to their survival.

- » Formed in 2012 at a meeting of representatives from six environmental groups, we are alliance of nature, environmental and conservation organisations, Nature Refuge owners, businesses and individuals.
- » Our goal is to protect important habitat and green space from inappropriate development.
- » Protect the Bush Alliance now has 23 member organisations, thus representing over 30,000 people.

Our work

PTBA advocates for the improved protection of areas of high conservation value and high biodiversity submissions, surveys, lobbying and other appropriate actions.

Data Collection and Surveys

We conduct and facilitate surveys and collect data on the biodiversity of areas of conservation value under threat.

Working with Landholders and Communities

We work with landholders and communities to encourage a greater understanding of the importance of conserving areas of high conservation value on private land.

Submissions

PTBA members examine proposed changes to conservation legislation and submit recommendations to relevant government departments.

Strengthening Connections

PTBA members work closely with member organisations to advocate for and strengthen environmental legislation.
