MEDIA RELEASE

Re: Your skills can help the environment

Householders' Options to Protect the Environment (HOPE) Inc. is encouraging Australians to discover how their time and skills can support environmental volunteering.

Volunteering offers a chance to learn something new, meet people with shared interests and contribute to a cause that matters to you.

Environmental groups offer different ways to get involved, from tree planting and local clean-ups to research, writing and helping organise community events.

Before choosing an opportunity, think about what you enjoy, what you would like to learn and how much time you can realistically offer.

HOPE is a national community-based not-for-profit environment organisation with the principal aim of advocating for responsible and sustainable stewardship of the environment. HOPE is largely unfunded and managed entirely by volunteers.

Its volunteers help research environmental issues, prepare publications and media releases, and support events that encourage environmental awareness and practical action.

Some activities are based near HOPE's Toowoomba office, while research and publications work can also be undertaken by email, allowing people elsewhere to contribute.

To explore opportunities, visit HOPE, find a local group through Landcare Australia, or browse SEEK Volunteer.

Ask about each role's responsibilities, time commitment and available training or support to help find an opportunity that suits you.

If you would like to contribute to HOPE, contact office@hopeaustralia.org.au to discuss your interests, skills and availability.

Your contribution could help someone understand an environmental issue, take practical action or become involved themselves.
